Eddystone Lighthouse. This famous lighthouse stands on a reef of rock out at sea, about 14 miles from Plymouth. The first lighthouse erected here was swept away in a storm with its builder, Winstanley (in 1700); then followed one which stood for 50 years, and was burned in 1755; and next came Smeaton's Tower, which was superseded after nearly 120 years by the present lighthouse in 1882, which stands 130 feet above high-water mark.

Glad at London on Sunday
Much love, Grace

Dear Ivy, Thanks for your p.c. I'm enjoying myself tho' it's too middle aged for me. Plymouth photos to follow. We saw Dartmouth Castle yesterday. Hope you are all well. Lots of love, Grace
